The Aston Martin Valour is a limited-edition, front-engine supercar, which is powered by a 5.2-litre twin-turbocharged V12 and only 110 units were produced to mark the carmaker's 110th anniversary.

Designed to push the limits of performance, the Valour features Aston Martin's most rigid body yet, crafted from full carbon fibre panels and a lightweight bonded aluminium structure. Focusing on an authentic, unfiltered driving experience, it comes equipped with a 7-speed manual gearbox, making it a true car enthusiast's dream. The name "Valour" reflects its essence—signifying "great courage in the face of danger, especially in battle."

This rare UK supplied example was commissioned with the most stunning specification that includes: Chameleon style paint finish in Valhalla Andromeda Red at an additional cost of £100,000, Sports plus ventilated seats and 16-way memory, Q style satin red tinted carbon fibre interior trims, Q style satin red carbon fibre gear lever surround, polished titanium gear knob,
